I've just read this assessment thing and it's doing my head in already. We get marked in four different ways. First Jonesy marks us; then the other groups mark us; then we mark each other; then I have to mark myself. I mean, what's the point in that? I thought that once we'd done the presentation, then that were it: work done. And this thing about marking each other: it's obvious we're gonna give each other good marks! I suppose if you're in a group you don't get on with you might not. I think we're gonna be okay. This presentation's gonna be cool. Especially the role play: that's gonna be a right laugh.

I'm still a bit concerned about Muzz's conclusion though. I mean, I've got nothing against the guy, really, but he's gonna have to be really clear with it. Because if he isn't, we're gonna get a bad mark. I suppose I'll just have to see how he is in rehearsal. If he's no good, I'll just have to tell him.
