

Episode Eight

Transcript

- Delia: Guys, I was thinking about this assessment last night: we haven't even talked about it yet.
- Muzz: There is something about it in the brief. It says that the assessment criteria is in the module pack.
- Delia: Yeah it is, but it's ages since I've read it. Has anyone got a copy? I know we get assessed on the presentation, and I think we have to mark each other as well, but I can't remember any more than that.
- Muzz: Yes, no no, I thought also that we assess each other. I think that will be very interesting.
- Rob: If I'm marking you lot, then you've all failed!
- Shireen: Well Liam definitely has.
- Vikki: Maybe he's dropped out.
- Delia: That won't affect our mark will it? Like, we won't automatically lose a sixth of our mark or something?
- Rob: Well that's not fair! It's not our fault he can't be bothered to show up! I'm gonna email Jonesy and get on to it; make sure we don't lose any marks.
- Shireen: You're such a hero, Rob!
- Rob: Well you can have 2% for being the goggiest member of the group.
- Shireen: Heh, funny!
- Vikki: Stop flirting, this assessment is serious.
- Shireen: God, as if!
- Muzz: Look, we're going to be assessed on how we deliver this presentation, but how do we assess each other?
- Delia: Well I think you usually mark each other on things like ideas; contribution; commitment; stuff like that.
- Rob: Well what's to stop us from giving each other top marks then?
- Shireen: Well yeah, but I could say I'm gonna give you top marks...and then not do.
- Muzz: No, no, but we can trust each other, can't we?
- Vikki: Look, it doesn't work like that. If we do it like that, it'll look like we haven't done it properly.
- Delia: Well, like you might not give me a good mark for ideas, but then give me a good mark for designing the slides.
- Muzz: And I've written the conclusion.
- Shireen: Guys, if we think tactically about this yeah, we can give each other good marks, but in different areas. Just really subtly.

Rob: Yeah. Yeah that's a good idea, is that. We'll give each other overall good marks, just with different points of view.

Vikki: And it won't look at all suspicious when we all mark each other so differently?!

Rob: Well all right; we need to get our stories straight after we've read it.

Vikki: Since we haven't read it, how do we know our presentation's gonna meet the assessment criteria?

Delia: Well we do know some stuff: we know that we all have to present, and that the total time's gotta be twenty minutes. I don't see what else there is that's important.

Muzz: So will we get individual marks on the day?

Delia: No I think we get an overall group mark for the presentation.

Rob: As long as our presentation's good, and we all speak a bit, we should get top marks.

Vikki: Depends who marks it. How do we know that the other groups aren't gonna mark us?

Shireen: What?! The other groups can't mark us; they haven't seen what we've been doing.

Delia: Neither's the tutor, though. I suppose they're just marking us on the presentation, and the content and stuff like that. No one sees all the work that goes into it.

Muzz: So that's why we have to mark each other.

Rob: It's alright: if they give us a bad mark, we'll just give them a bad mark back.

Vikki: But how would we know?

Shireen: Seriously, I hadn't thought about them marking us. What if they mark us down so that they look better?

Delia: There's no point worrying about that. Let's just wait till we've read the criteria, and then we'll talk about it.
