Rob: I've gotta be honest: it was complete rubbish.

Delia: Was it really that bad?

Rob: Yeah, it were.

Shireen: We've gotta do better than that next week, guys. It was awful.

Muzz: But that's what we're here to talk about today: how to make it better.

Rob: We don't wanna make it better; we wanna make it great. I wanna get a good mark out of this, Muzz.

Muzz: Okay, that's great then. To start with, you can stop being so stupid. The role play was just a joke.

Vikki: Thanks Muzz! I spent hours on that!

Muzz: No no no Vikki: you're writing was good. I meant the laughing.

Delia: Yeah, you couldn't hear what you were saying because you were giggling so much.

Shireen: Yeah, well at least we weren't boring. All you did were read off your notes.

Rob: Be fair, Shireen. She did look up once.

Vikki: Yeah, I've got to agree, Delia. You've gotta learn your introduction: you can't just read it out, it looks so unprofessional.

Muzz: I think you're being a bit unfair to Delia. We only wrote it last week. She needs more time to learn it.

Shireen: She's had eight weeks.

Delia: Oh, come on, you know I only wrote it last week.

Shireen: Well that's what I mean. Why did we only write it last week? We've had ages to do this project guys. And I said right at the start that we needed someone to push things forward, but would you listen?

Delia: Look, I'm sorry but I've had enough of this.

Vikki: Look what you've done now, Shireen, you've really upset her.

Shireen: Me?? We all had a go at her.

Muzz: I don't think we gave her constructive feedback. You must all apologise to her when she returns.

Vikki: Yeah, we might have been a bit rough on her, but she clearly hasn't looked at this. And it's gotta be right, you know. She's always going on about how many presentations she's done, but it doesn't show, does it?

Rob: No, she's written a lot of them. She's always said to us she doesn't like getting up and speaking in front of people.

Shireen: Yeah, well that's tough. We all have to present a section, and we knew that from the start. I even swapped with her so she could do the intro. I really wanted to do that bit.

Rob: You've made such sacrifices, haven't you, Shireen??
