

Episode Six

Transcript

Vikki: So shall we go through what to put on the slides then, one by one?

Shireen: Yeah yeah; I've got PowerPoint on my laptop, so we can put it straight in.

Delia: Well shall I just go through what we've got before you type it up?
1. introduce team; 2. outline content of presentation; 3. barriers to learning.

Muzz: Well for four, I have written "how to overcome barriers." But I'm not quite sure what we're going to include here. It says here that we need to be "drawing on the personal experiences of the group, and relevant theory."

Vikki: Maybe typing it straight into the slides isn't the best way of doing it. Let's be more creative and maybe do a mind map or something, gather all our ideas together.

Rob: We need to find some theory for these barriers here.

Vikki: I'll look for some and bring them next week.

Muzz: So how are we going to do this role play?

Delia: How about an interview?

Rob: That's boring.

Vikki: Let's just get all our ideas down; and there's no such thing as a bad idea.

Delia: Or we could do it like a game show. Because I saw a group once do something like Who Wants To Be a Millionaire and that was really good. You'd make a good host, actually.

Shireen: Oh yeah, we could do it like Big Brother.

Vikki: Or Jerry Springer.

Delia: Question Time?

Rob: No, that's really dull.

Delia: I thought there was no such thing as a bad idea?

Rob: Don't be so touchy, Delia. You know I don't mean it: it's just me.

Muzz: We need props.

Vikki: And costumes.

Rob: Some fake tan.

Shireen: Who for – Jerry Springer?

Rob: No, for all of them!
[group laughs]

Vikki: Shall we decide who's gonna present each bit?
[general agreement]

Shireen: Right we need one person to do the introduction; one person to do the conclusion, and then three of us to do the role play.

Rob: Does anyone know if this Liam guy is gonna show up?

Shireen: Forget about him. Do you know how many times I've emailed him? He must have left the course or something.

Vikki: I'll do the role play.

Delia: I'd rather not do the role play.

Rob: Cool. I'll do role play then. It sounds like a laugh.

Muzz: I'd like to do the conclusion.

Rob: Well, I think you should do role play, Muzz.

Muzz: Why do you say that?

Rob: It's quite an important bit, and we need it to be clear.

Vikki: That's not fair! I know Muzz has got an accent, but I understand him perfectly.

Muzz: I know I have an accent, but if I practise, I'll be fine.

Shireen: Okay, so, Vikki and Rob do role play, Muzz do the conclusion, and then...why don't you wanna do role play, Delia?

Delia: I just get really nervous and mix up my words and stuff. I'm alright if I've got the PowerPoint to prompt me, so can I do the introduction? Anyway, I think you'd be good at the role play.

Shireen: Yeah well, I'm happy with that.

Vikki: Ok, well I'll script the role play and bring it next week.

Shireen: Nice one

Rob: Big time
