Oh wow, that was brilliant. Our role play was ace: I'm so glad that I convinced the rest of the group to do it. We're gonna get such a good mark for that. And Muzz and Delia's bits were brilliant too. When Muzz forgot to ask if anybody had any questions, I stepped in, and it looked like it was meant to be that way, so it was all good. And I've no idea why Delia was so nervous, because she was really good.

Well, I've finished the reflective assignment now, so I've just got to do the peer evaluation. We've gotta mark each other on a one to five scale, based on the last ten weeks, and everything that's happened throughout the project. Delia, well...it took her a while to get into it, but she has offered to do a lot, and she's kept us really well planned, so I think I'll give her a four overall. Shireen, well...Shireen and I have had our differences, and to be honest she's spent more time flirting with Rob recently than focusing on the project, so I'll give her a three. Rob, he... well he's done more than I expected him to do, to be honest. Erm, he did sort out some of the arguments, but he didn't really do much of the work, so I'll give him a three, maybe a four. And Muzz... well, Muzz kept us really focussed on the academic side, and to be honest I had no idea Muzz was so clever until about half was through, and he's had tons of ideas, so for me Muzz is gonna get the highest mark.

I'm gonna mark myself a four, because I did do most of the work, and the role play was my idea. And Liam...he's gonna get a big fat zero for his amazing contribution of nothing. I can't believe he had the cheek to turn up today and expect a piggy back on the back of all our work. I don't think so!
